

BON APPÉTIT

OCTOBER 2005

$3.99

AMERICA'S FOOD AND ENTERTAINING MAGAZINE

BON APPÉTIT
OCTOBER 2005

Parma on the Prairie

Iowa-based La Quercia has just released the first-ever domestic organic prosciutto. The Prosciutto Americano Green Label—produced from heirloom and heritage pork with curing methods adapted from the Italian tradition—is lusciously sweet with incredible depth of flavor. (available at Whole Foods; go to laquercia.us for more information)

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT: COURTESY OF ROBERT DISCALFANI; ANDREW SOUTHAM/FOX; COURTESY OF THINKFILM

Vino VIDEO

For most people, wine is just another word for something good to drink, but for some (think Miles from Sideways) it is a liquid history remarking on thousands of years of viticulture. Jonathan Nossiter's Mondovino, which was recently released on DVD, is a film full of oeno-attitude for the unrepentant and excitable wine lover. Overflowing with bitter family rivalries, the skewering of Europe's wine aristocracy, anti-globalization, and enough vineyard dogs to make you reconsider the purity of the grape, Mondovino is a passionate defense of the artisanal winemaker. If you care about the future of wine, this is one DVD you will want to watch immediately. ($23; amazon.com) —Eric Steinman ■

Winegrower Battista Columbu and filmmaker Jonathan Nossiter in Sardinia